

Are you a full time undergraduate student working towards a degree in Engineering? Are you working on a project that could benefit society? If so, then check out ISEI Scholarship.

ISEI is short for Improving Society through Engineering Innovation. This is a project based scholarship for full time undergraduate engineering students in California, who are working on projects that will provide a benefit to society. The application period begins March 31, 2013 and runs until April 30, 2013. This is an annual scholarship and for 2013 the current award amount is $500.

Applicants are evaluated on their ability to communicate ideas. It's not always apparent while you're in school, but engineering is all about communication. Each applicant will be evaluated on their project description, how well they argue the benefit to society, and how they would promote their project to others.

For further details and apply please visit iseischolarship.com.