

Connectifier

Software Engineer (Generalist)

Build the next generation employment platforms, and help great companies find great people.

Connectifier is changing the way recruiting is done today. Our engineering team from Google, Microsoft Research, Berkeley National Lab, Carnegie Mellon, and Stanford is building large scale data analysis software that processes professional profiles from all around the web. By analyzing code repos, blogs, and social profiles we're helping recruiters and hiring managers connect more efficiently with the candidates best for their openings.

We are deployed at 40% of the Fortune-100, and our revenue is growing extremely fast. At Connectifier you'll get to work with top growing companies and fantastic brand names and deliver a best in class product.

Example projects

- Build a predictive AI model of employee success based on a dataset of millions of people
- Build infrastructure for running distributed, restartable tasks on a cluster of machines

Requirements

- Bachelor's Degree in Computer Science or commensurate work experience
- Software engineering work or internship experience

Preferred experience

- Application of algorithmic knowledge and intuition to solve complex problems
- Experience building software with a statically-typed backend language (Java preferred. C, C++, Scala, etc. are all sufficient)
- Knowledge of machine learning, artificial intelligence, big data and web technologies are a plus

How to apply and what to expect

- Submit application at here
- Be prepared to answer technical questions and write code to solve very challenging problems during the initial phone interview, a 5 hour on-site (or video chat) interview and on-site coding project.
