

 Google Engineering Practicum Internship

An opportunity for sophomores/second years in the US and Canada

*Application Deadline October 15th *

Google is invested in increasing the pipeline of future computer scientists and software developers, particularly those who are historically underrepresented in the field. Many aspiring computer scientists could benefit from a program that bridges the gap between academic study and a professional internship. With this in mind, Google announces the fourth year of the Engineering Practicum internship program [formerly known as BOLD Practicum] for Summer 2012.

Engineering Practicum is a full-length, paid, summer software engineering internship. Students work on production-level projects in a team environment, attend training to enhance their technical and professional skills, and receive mentorship from Google engineers.

*The program is open to all qualified current college sophomores, and is committed to addressing diversity in the field of Computer Science.

*Students with disabilities, as well as those who are members of other groups that are historically underrepresented in the technology industry (women, Native-American/Aboriginal, African-American and Hispanic) are encouraged to apply. Google is proud to partner with Lime Connect to source high-potential/highly accomplished candidates with disabilities

Note that the system currently does not allow designation as a member of Google diversity partner groups like Lime Connect (they are working to add this), but that Google values, and wants to know, of students' affiliation with Lime Connect as a candidate with a disability.
