

Obama Campaign Data Team Job Opportunity

The Obama campaign is looking to find talented students or recent grads to join their data team this summer. They've created a great training program called the Field Tech Academy to train promising, passionate, and diverse folks to do campaign data work.

The application and more information about the program can be found here: <http://OFA.BO/ofta>
Campaign experience is not required. They're looking for people who like working with numbers, are detail oriented and diligent, can communicate well, and of course are interested in helping re-elect the President. The deadline to apply is May 2nd.

In his State of the Union speech in January, President Obama said data management is one of the "skills that businesses are looking for right now." The numbers bear this out- Data Management is one of the fastest growing careers right now. This training is a great opportunity not only to help the President, but to learn the basics of a very marketable skill.
