

Pod

I am searching for a talented programmer to develop an app. I created a virtual communications platform called Pod. Pod allows anonymous communication and gives users the ability to wipe their contributed content clean at any time — think of it as a robust and anonymous Snapchat. There is tremendous potential here.

The venture is already well-developed, as I have the full web version up and running and all patent applications have been submitted. I also have the detailed wireframe completed for the app. I am flexible with respect to the platform and coding language.

Since the functionality has all been hammered out (as detailed in both the full website and in my wireframe), I am estimating it would take two to three months of somewhat diligent work to get the app together. But I am willing to work around the right programmer's schedule and other time commitments — it's flexible.

What do you get out of it? An equity share of the venture, open to negotiation, largely dependent on your level of expertise and willingness to commit to the project. This is a fantastic opportunity to join a developed start-up for absolutely zero money out of pocket, and tremendous upside. You will never be asked to contribute anything to the venture, other than your programming talents.

Over the next couple of weeks I will introduce the most highly qualified applicants to the website and walk through all of the functionality. That will give everyone a better sense of the project, and determine whether there is a "good fit."

Please shoot me your resume and a note if you are interested to johnwvalencia@gmail.com, and let me know if you have any questions about the venture.