

This is a research opportunity for NSF-sponsored Research Experiences for Undergraduates (REU) program Called "Water, Society, and Health".

The program is based at the University of Virginia, but REU students will spend Summer 2013 in Limpopo Province, South Africa conducting community-based research at the intersection of water, societal, and human health disciplines. Student participants will receive a $3,000 stipend and all travel expenses to S. Africa. Additional details are provided at the project web site, which can be accessed at the following URL:
